One day, God chose to call you Home.
God's ways are often hard to understand,
Why after only fifteen short years as our son
You were taken away.

It sometimes still seems it can't be,
But each morning when awake I see,
The emptiness that haunts every waking moment that only echoes our great loss.

The deafening silence in the house that once was filled with your cheerful voice...
That often said "Hey, Mom, what's for supper?"
I miss your laughter, your ornery half-grins,
and the life you brought to our home.

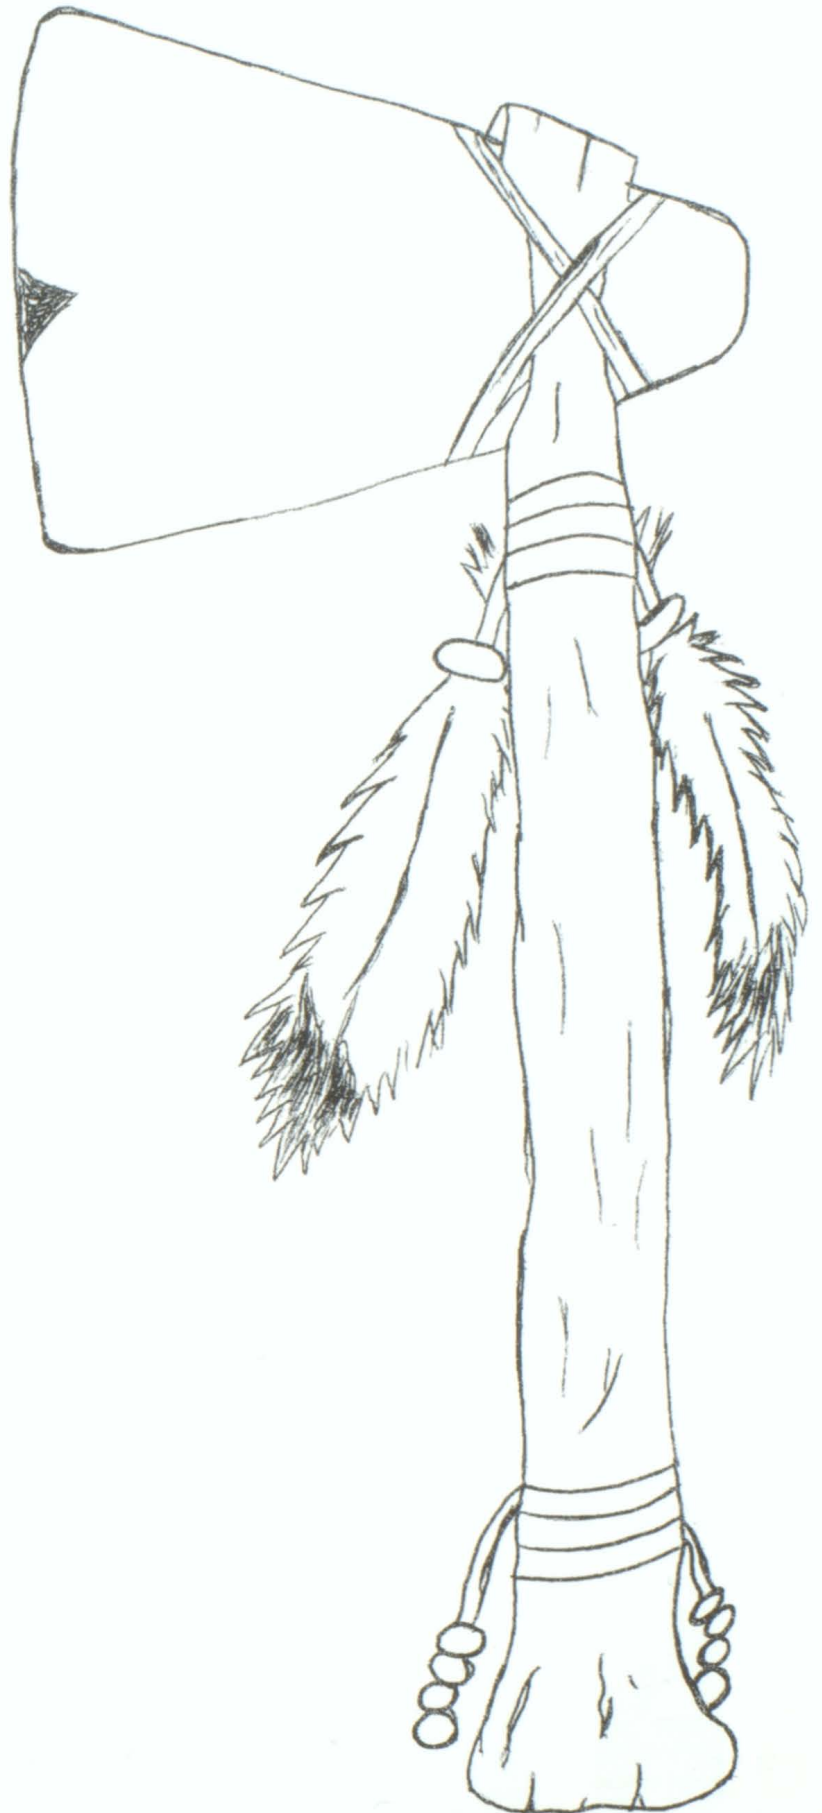

I miss the brother you were to your sister.
I miss straightening your ties and ironing your shirts.
I miss the sound of your boots as you came in the door,
the sight of your dirty jeans in the hamper with pockets filled with ginseng, dirt and yellowroot.

Your sudden and unexpected departure from life and our home
Left a far greater vacuum in our lives than an empty bedroom and silence.
We too were empty, and felt as if every ounce of life
had been drained from us.
In one moment's time so many of our hopes and dreams had evaporated.
All the plans related to your future were over.

How our hearts long to see your face.
But my soul rejoices to know that you are in Heaven.
I remember the day your dad said,
"Son, do you know the way to Heaven?"
And you walked the aisle at our church,
As an eight year old boy and received Christ as Saviour.
Heaven is real. That is my Joy,

I remember the bad haircut you got.
You said "Mom, it's just hair. It'll grow back."
I can hear you in Heaven say, "Mom, it's just a few days
'Til You, Dad and Rebekah will join me."
And someday TOGETHER in Heaven we'll shout
"O death, where is thy sting? O grave, where is thy victory?"
